

land, they call a gulf: a bay is a gulf that has a capacious mouth: the Archipelago is a sea in which there are a number of islands: a Streight is a passage between one sea and another: a Lake is a body of water, surrounded on all sides by the land; and a River is water which is continually running. Take notice of this, children.

Miss Julia. Yes, Mademoiselle: a Gulf is a part of the sea which runs into the land; as the Gulf of Venice: a Streight is an arm of the sea which joins two seas together; as the Streights of Gibraltar, which join the main ocean to the Mediterranean Sea.

Mademoiselle. Very well: they call that a Streight also which is bound in by two lands. Look at the map; between the island of Corsica, and the island of Sardinia, you see there is a little arm of the sea. It is called the Streights of Boniface.

Miss Sprightly. Pray, Mademoiselle, why is the narrow part of the sea which is

is between Italy and Sicily, called the Pharos of Messina? What is the signification of the word Pharos?

Mademoiselle. I don't understand Greek, my dear; and this word is derived from the Greek language. But we may be able to find out the meaning. Ships that are out at sea cannot come within a certain distance of land without danger: a light is therefore put on the sea-shore to give notice that land is not far off, which cautions the sailors from approaching too near.

Ptolemy, one of the kings of Egypt, built such a beautiful marble watch-tower, that it was reckoned one of the seven wonders of the world. A light was placed upon the top of this tower to warn the ships during the night, and ever since that time they have been called Pharos's; and it is from one of these towers, the Pharos of Messina, that this streight takes its name. We may therefore suppose, that the word Pharos signifies a light to guide the ships in the night.